

@BulldogsTell

"Once I was attending Fresno State, deeply rooted personal issues plagued my first year at state. But thanks to the wonderful counseling and other services that Fresno State provides, I have bounced back re-energized and happier my second year!"
Skylar Munkers

"As a first generation Chicana college student and daughter of immigrants, I didn't expect to have accomplished as much as I have and will continue to."
Selena Carbajal

Every student story matters.

Jason Haskins

"Being a parent is the most fulfilling thing I've done in my life and it makes everything else worth it."

My Unah Her

"...develop several skills, including a more critical and empathic view of the world around me, as well as a greater appreciation and acceptance of myself."

Paola Gutierrez

"Being a young mother has not prevented me from being involved because Fresno State has given me opportunities that I never would have imagined."

Hannah Giardullo

"My involvement in the Greek community has greatly impacted by experience at Fresno State."

"Sometimes I do not know why I ended up here, but I am so grateful that I did." Kenisha Brown

The vision of @BulldogsTell is to tell the story of our programs, events, and services through the stories of students that experience and utilize them.

@BulldogsTell launched in January 2018. One student is featured each day on our Facebook, Twitter, and Instagram pages. The accounts are run from the Division of Student Affairs and Enrollment Management but students campus wide are featured.

"I am a first generation student from Sri Lanka. I followed the British education system until high school. I didn't know anything about campus involvement."
