First-ever #SACHat, featuring the Fresno State Money Management Center

Purpose & Background

In collaboration with The Student Affairs Collective, the Fresno State Money Management Center hosted a Twitter chat to discuss financial literacy and what it being done on college campuses across the country. The Student Affairs Collective's mission, in collaboration with NASPA, is to create the ultimate online community of student affairs professionals to help one another play, grow and reach high levels of success.

The Results

The #SACHat led to an increase in visibility for the Money Management Center and the work being done to educate Fresno State students about financial literacy.

Over the duration of the hour, the #SACHat led to 281 engagements within the community of participants.

The overall sentiment of the chat was positive, with 69 likes over the hour.

The Opportunity

The Fresno State Money Management Center is seeking opportunities to spread the word both on campus and in the community and saw this chat as an opportunity to generate awareness as well as learn from other campuses.

1 Benefit of #SACHat

The Fresno State Money Management Center was able to reach out to NASPA/#SACHat and propose a collaboration which led to:

- the ability to craft unique questions and messages for the audience to engage with during the chat
- a collaboration that had never been done before
- an opportunity to host a chat and share the work being done for student success at Frsn State

2 Looking Ahead
